

'Me too' could spur 'Year of Women' in politics

Your Turn

Amy Miller
Guest Columnist

Whether you celebrate Christmas, Hanukkah, Mawlid an-Nabi, Rohatsu, Kwanza, Yule or even Festivus (you know, the Christmas alternative made famous by the television comedy Seinfeld), December is a time to reflect on the past and look to the future.

This year in particular we have much to reflect upon and to look forward to.

Earlier this year, prompted by a tweet by actress Alyssa Milano in response to the Harvey Weinstein sexual misconduct scandal, women (and some men) across the country decided to tell their personal stories of sexual abuse and harassment. As we reflect on the past year, that may well stand out as the watershed moment of 2017.

Seemingly overnight the "me too" movement grew from a social media blip to a societal groundswell. The

See MILLER, Page 8G